The increasing cost of prescription drugs has been a source of concern for many in recent years. Drug pricing legislation is being discussed by Congress and the Trump administration and is a topic of interest for senior lawyers, lawmakers, health policy groups, and the biotech and pharmaceutical industries. Here are two perspectives on the issue.

DRUG PRICING DEBATE

BY TED R. LOVE

In the past two years, drug pricing has become a major national issue. It is perhaps the most divisive issue of our times. As we approach the midterm elections in November, drug pricing has become the most talked-about policy issue. The reason for this is simple: The American people are fed up with the high price of prescription drugs. They want change, and they want it now.

Patients withakiwi disease — or other serious medical conditions — may be waiting for the effective treatment they need. Some patients wait months or even years for their medications to be approved by the FDA. In some cases, patients can wait years for their medications to be approved by the FDA. In some cases, patients may even need to pay for their medications out of pocket. This is unacceptable. We need to do better.

The RIPA board is making meaningful change.

The RIPA board has been working hard to make prescription drugs more affordable and accessible. The board is currently reviewing and analyzing data from the pharmaceutical industry. The board is also working to improve the transparency of the industry. The board is doing a great job.

The RIPA board has been making meaningful change.

The RIPA board has been working hard to make prescription drugs more affordable and accessible. The board is currently reviewing and analyzing data from the pharmaceutical industry. The board is also working to improve the transparency of the industry. The board is doing a great job.

The community depends on law enforcement, and protection, and law enforcement is the community to report and help supplement.

PUBLIC SAFETY LEADS HONEST TALKS ON PROFILING

BY DAVE RICHARDS

The Department of Justice announced that it is taking steps to address the issue of racial profiling.

The Department of Justice announced that it is taking steps to address the issue of racial profiling.

The Department of Justice announced that it is taking steps to address the issue of racial profiling.

The Department of Justice announced that it is taking steps to address the issue of racial profiling.

The Department of Justice announced that it is taking steps to address the issue of racial profiling.